1. The Diplomatic (Foreign Affairs) Department of the Harbin Municipal Government employs a Russian engineer, Ivan Bolshakov, as an adviser. Another Russian, Mamot (full name unknown), is employed as an adviser in the Education Section.
2. The most influential Soviet personnel in Harbin are Consul General (G. I.) Pavlichev; Vice-Consul (M. P.) Lyskov; and the manager of the Dalbank (unidentified). General Zhuravlov, head of the Chung Ch'ang Railway Office, is also an important person in the city.
3. A Russian, M. A. Gintse, heads the Liddell Brothers Veneer Factory, a British firm, the only foreign concern in Harbin which escaped being taken over by the Soviets or Chinese Communists. After the arrival of the Soviet Army, Gintse was arrested, but he was later released and now operates the plant on a reduced scale.
